In an industry driven by volatility, analysts play an important role in deciding the future of a company's stock price. However, it is often difficult to figure out if they are making genuine assessments or are just making up their minds, especially when the market is moving in a particular direction. Does Apple Stock Analysts Make Up Their Minds? While the answer to this question is no one could deny the power that analysts have, especially in a high-volume industry, it is hard to pinpoint the influence that they have over a company's stock price. A report from Yahoo Finance showed that, in the last twelve months, analysts' forecasts for Apple's earnings, revenue and cash flow generated a collective $28 billion profit for Apple's stock price. Interestingly, it also showed that when analysts change their minds on a company, the market behaves in a way that it is not entirely rational. Analysts are generally considered to be either "sell" or "buy" calls, meaning that they are certain that a company is going to be outperforming the market, or the reverse. In the years that followed, Apple stock became the best-performing stock over the last six years, until the stock price dropped considerably. From April 2013 to April 2015, Apple's stock price changed 17.5%, while the S&P 500 was only down 2.6%. When Apple stock closed at $671.27 on March 7, 2015, it was the first time in the company's history that it reached a value greater than $700, since the beginning of 2009. However, it is surprising to see how the stock dropped to $500 in the following months. It dropped to $330 in September, $309.99 in October, $282 in November, and $231 in December. In the following year, the stock price continued to move up and down and reached $606.24 by September 2016. What Caused the Price Drop 82157476af
